THE TOMBSTONE AGENT.

Like many other branches of trade, agents for tombstone manufactories are quite numerous, who often find it to their advantage to work upon the feelings a little in order to effect a sale. The other day one happened to be in a strange section and was sent to call upon a Mrs, Brown, who had lately lost her husband. He introduced himself and was invited to sit down; he spoke of the weather, and then getting around to business said, rather tenderly: So you have lost your that resemblance. He said he sympathised with her in the hour of her affliction; that the best of friends were doomed to part, and but few knew whose turn

He had not the honor of being acquainted with Mr. Brown, but he had heard highest terms of praise (this was his usual style whether he had or not); every body considered him an honorable man and affectionate busband, and they mourned his foss with the most carnest and tensaid he was honorable man and affection
